Acknowledgement of country and traditional owners

The Global Compact Network Australia acknowledges Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians as the traditional owners and custodians of the land on which we work. We pay our respects to elders past, present and future.
Significant two-year partnership between the Global Compact Network Australia and the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) launched by Foreign Minister, Julie Bishop MP, aimed at building business engagement in sustainable development and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

New Sustainable Development Leadership Group launched, adding to the GCNA’s existing engagement platforms, the Human Rights Leadership Group, Anti-Corruption Leadership Group and Environment Leadership Group.

Continuing strong growth, with a number of new members including ANZ Bank, David Jones, Deloitte, EY, Fairtrade Australia & NZ, Intrepid Travel, National Australia Bank, Optus, Republic of Everyone, Stockland, Tata Consultancy Services, Visy Industries, Wesfarmers, Yarra Valley Water, Australia-Africa Mining Industry Group, Monash University and RMIT University.

18 events delivered during the year across all of the Global Compact’s core areas of human rights, labour, environment, anti-corruption and sustainable development, engaging over 900 participants.

Appointment of GCNA Executive Manager, Alice Cope, as regional representative to the UN Global Compact’s Local Networks Advisory Group.
The United Nations Global Compact is the world’s largest corporate sustainability initiative, with over 13,000 participating businesses and other organisations.

The UN Global Compact is both a practical framework for action and a platform for demonstrating commitment and leadership. The initiative calls on businesses to align their operations and strategies with ten universally accepted principles in the areas of human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption, and to take action to advance societal goals including sustainable development.

The Global Compact Network Australia (GCNA) is the Australian, business-led network of the UN Global Compact.

The GCNA brings together signatories to the UN Global Compact – including a number of Australia’s leading companies, non-profits and universities – to advance corporate sustainability and the private sector’s contribution to sustainable development.

The GCNA does this through a platform for dialogue, learning and influence that is inclusive, practical and leading edge, supporting our companies’ practical implementation efforts and bringing the UN Global Compact to life in the Australian context and wherever Australian companies operate. Through its activities, the GCNA provides a meeting point where organisations can build best practice around sustainability and connect with networks and experts within Australia and globally.

Since its launch in 2009, the GCNA has grown to become one of Australia’s leading corporate sustainability initiatives.

Vision

The Global Compact Network Australia is the leading driver of effective business practices that deliver social, economic and environmental gains.

Mission

We lead, enable and connect business, government and civil society to practically apply the principles of the UN Global Compact.
Human Rights
Principle 1 Businesses should support and respect the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights; and Principle 2 make sure that they are not complicit in human rights abuses.

Labour
Principle 3 Businesses should uphold the freedom of association and the effective recognition of the right to collective bargaining;
Principle 4 the elimination of all forms of forced and compulsory labour;
Principle 5 the effective abolition of child labour; and
Principle 6 the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation.

Environment
Principle 7 Businesses should support a precautionary approach to environmental challenges;
Principle 8 undertake initiatives to promote greater environmental responsibility; and
Principle 9 encourage the development and diffusion of environmentally friendly technologies.

Anti-Corruption
Principle 10 Businesses should work against corruption in all its forms, including extortion and bribery.
The UN Global Compact provides a universal language for corporate responsibility, and provides a framework to guide all businesses regardless of size, complexity or location. Whether a company is already a global sustainability leader, or at the beginning of its sustainability journey, the UN Global Compact allows it to tell its sustainability story through an established, globally recognised, UN-backed framework.

The GCNA continues to grow, with fifteen new organisations joining between July 2014 and the issue of this report: ANZ Bank, Australia-Africa Mining Industry Group, David Jones, Deloitte, EY, Fairtrade Australia & NZ, Intrepid Travel, Monash University, National Australia Bank, Optus, Republic of Everyone, RMIT University, Stockland, Tata Consultancy Services, Visy Industries, Wesfarmers and Yarra Valley Water.

2015 marked the 15th anniversary of the UN Global Compact, providing a time to reflect on the initiative’s achievements and opportunities for continued future impact.

In 1999, in a speech to business leaders at the World Economic Forum, then UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan proposed “a global compact of shared values and principles, which will give a human face to the global market.” From the initiative’s subsequent launch in 2000 with only a handful of companies, the UN Global Compact’s journey to become the world’s largest corporate sustainability initiative has been remarkable. The UN Global Compact now counts over 13,000 signatories, a range of engagement platforms driving business action, including Caring for Climate, the CEO Water Mandate and Women’s Empowerment Principles, and sister initiatives that are driving change in related spheres including the Principles for Responsible Investment and Principles for Responsible Management Education.

Business is well placed to find opportunities for positive impact, and in this regard the opportunity now is significant. The Sustainable Development Goals – which set global development priorities for the next 15 years – identify a critical role for the private sector in implementing and financing action, and invite companies to partner with the UN, governments and civil society like never before. The SDGs provide a new framework, with local and global relevance, to guide the efforts in creating positive impact.

Over the past three years we have been counting down to the SDGs. Now we are looking forward to the vast opportunities that exist for business, government and civil society.

The SDGs have been adopted, but now the hard work begins to invest in and implement the agenda at an international, regional, national and local level – not just in developing countries, but in all countries.

The question facing the GCNA and our companies now is: how do we catalyse the market transformation we need to ensure an equitable future and healthy planet for the generations that are to come?

We stand at a critical point in time – a time at which we need business to take its place in finding solutions to the critical challenges facing Australia and the world, to take corporate sustainability to scale and to change markets from within.
The UN Global Compact has identified three critical pathways for making this shift:

1. Making sustainability the ‘business of business’. We need to engage more companies with the Global Compact, and challenge them to rethink their corporate purpose and recalibrate their goals.

2. Breaking down barriers and energising positive drivers. Collaboration between business, government, civil society and academia is critical in scaling impact. The GCNA plays a key role in this regard, as a business-led, yet multi-stakeholder initiative, and through strategic partnerships such as that launched recently with DFAT.

3. Driving new thinking for a new reality. The Global Compact’s ultimate goal is to inspire new ways of thinking and catalyse transformative action. As a new generation of business leaders step up, we expect a focus not just on growth and profit, but on truly sustainable legacy.

What must not get lost is that first, business must act responsibly and ‘do no harm’ – and the UN Global Compact’s core principles provide direction for this. Then, there is significant opportunity to create positive impact, and our engagement platforms locally and internationally provide opportunities to learn, share and collaborate in this regard.

Locally, the GCNA continues to enjoy strong growth, highlighting both the growing commitment of Australian businesses to lead on creating a sustainable future, and the Network’s value as a platform for learning and engagement.

Our activities also continue to grow in number and reach, and our two-year partnership with DFAT, announced in August, further supports this. We thank the Australian Government for their commitment and welcome the future opportunities this will bring for our members. We are now well placed to achieve our vision of becoming Australia’s leading initiative for corporate sustainability.

Beyond Australia, the GCNA plays an important role in the global family of country-based Global Compact local networks. This was recognised with Alice Cope, our Executive Manager, being elected as regional representative to the UN Global Compact’s Local Networks Advisory Group. With this appointment, we will continue to build relationships across the region and around the world, bringing a stronger voice to the UN Global Compact in New York representing Australia and the region’s interests.

I would like to acknowledge the contributions of our Directors who have retired this year. Richard Boele served on the GCNA Board for almost four years, fulfilling the roles of Director, Deputy Chair, Public Officer and Chair of the Finance, Risk and Audit Committee. Richard also made significant contributions to our Human Rights Leadership Group Steering Committee, and we highly value his continued involvement in that group.

Darragh Brennan was appointed as a Director at our 2014 AGM, but moved to a new company and so resigned his position in 2015. In addition to his contributions as a Director, Darragh was involved in our Environment Leadership Group Steering Committee for a number of years.

My deep thanks to my colleagues on the Board, for their time, insights, skills and commitment. We have a remarkable group of people who make significant time in their busy lives to advocate for the Global Compact.

To our Executive Manager, Alice Cope. We continue to benefit from your deep knowledge, drive and dedication. You lead the Network with passion and integrity and we are indebted to your commitment.

In closing, I would like to thank all of our members. The Network is only as strong as it is due to your many contributions and we greatly value your support and engagement.

The Global Compact is critically positioned to lead and drive the outcomes needed to create a better future for all. Never before has there been such a strong convergence of key sustainability issues, such as food security, water, gender equality and peace and justice, with key business risks and strategy. The Boardroom conversation is shifting – the momentum for action is building.

We look forward to working with you and showcasing your leadership in the year ahead.
2015 has been a most significant one for the GCNA and the global corporate sustainability agenda.

The GCNA continues to show strong growth in terms of membership and broader engagement, demonstrating both the value of our platform and the desire from Australian businesses to proactively contribute to the sustainability agenda domestically and internationally. All signs point to this growth continuing to build as the GCNA emerges as Australia’s leading hub for corporate sustainability.

An expanding area of work for the GCNA over the last year has been in relation to sustainable development and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The SDGs, launched in September, will shape global, regional and local development priorities until 2030.

The SDGs present an historic opportunity for businesses to align their strategies and activities with these global priorities, producing outcomes that advance societal goals and drive business success.

In February 2015, we convened with the Sustainable Development Solutions Network a significant multi-stakeholder workshop to bring companies up to speed with the global agenda, and highlight engagement opportunities.

On the policy front, the GCNA’s submission to, and appearance before, the Joint Parliamentary Committee’s inquiry into the role of the private sector in promoting economic growth and reducing poverty in the region, were well received, with the UN Global Compact being highlighted in the Committee’s report as a key framework in this space.

We also achieved a significant milestone with the announcement by the Hon. Julie Bishop MP, Foreign Minister, of a two-year partnership between the GCNA and Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade. The partnership aims to promote the GCNA’s mandate and bring more Australian companies into our network.

Through our partnership with DFAT, we have launched the Sustainable Development Leadership Group (SDLG) as a platform for business and stakeholders to engage in learning, dialogue and action around sustainable development and the SDGs. The SDLG adds to our existing engagement platforms – the Human Rights Leadership Group, Environment Leadership Group and Anti-Corruption Leadership Group.

Our strong relationship with DFAT and the new SDLG provide a unique channel for GCNA members to engage with the Australian Government around sustainability.
Our program of activities continues to be busy. We have been fortunate to hear from a number of leaders at our events during the year, including Anthony Pratt, Executive Chairman of Visy Industries, Michael Andrew, former Global Chairman of KPMG and co-chair of the Australian B20 Working Group on Anti-Corruption, Mick Gooda, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner, Professor Marcia Langton AM, Bob Massie, outgoing President and CEO of New Economy Coalition and co-founder and first chair of the Global Reporting Initiative and John Morrison, Executive Director, Institute for Human Rights and Business (UK), among others.

Human rights continues to be a hot topic for our companies, and remains a core focus area for the GCNA. Building on our inaugural Australian Dialogue on Business and Human Rights in 2014, we have recently concluded a second successful national multi-stakeholder dialogue, and continue to engage with business, government and civil society on moving the agenda forward.

Our Human Rights Leadership Group has also engaged with various partners around key topics of interest including supply chains and security and human rights. This has included launching our Security and Human Rights Community of Practice, providing a unique peer forum for senior security representatives from extractives companies to share experiences on providing security with respect for human rights in challenging contexts.

We continue to hear from our members that embedding sustainability in their organisations, and engaging colleagues from outside the sustainability team, remains challenging. To tackle this, our Environment Leadership Group has taken a new approach this year, designing events for sustainability practitioners to bring colleagues from other functions (risk, strategy, finance) to help them engage more effectively internally and facilitate cross-functional discussions on sustainability issues.

Our Anti-Corruption Leadership Group continues to provide a unique forum focused on peer learning. We continue to explore opportunities for the GCNA to drive national policy in this space and look forward to updating you on this as our thinking develops.

In closing, I would like to thank the GCNA Board members for their leadership and support during the year. Their significant contributions of time and energy have been critical to ensuring the GCNA goes from strength to strength.

Thanks also to our members for their continued support and drive to create a sustainable and inclusive future. I look forward to working with you over the coming year.

Our Activities

The past year was the busiest to date for the GCNA. With unprecedented levels of engagement from our members and stakeholders, we delivered 18 events between July 2014 and July 2015, attended by more than 900 participants.

The activities included here are for the period 1 July 2014 to 19 October 2015 (the issue date of this report).
Social Sustainability and Human Rights

Leading the national dialogue on business and human rights

2014 Australian Dialogue on Business and Human Rights

In partnership with the Australian Human Rights Commission
Sponsored by Rio Tinto, KPMG and La Trobe University
July 2014, Sydney

In July 2014, the Global Compact Network Australia and the Australian Human Rights Commission convened over 100 representatives from business, government, civil society and academia at the Australian Dialogue on Business and Human Rights: Challenges and opportunities for Australian businesses at home and abroad. This was Australia’s first national, multi-sector, multi-stakeholder dialogue on the issue and the GCNA’s most significant event to date.

Participants heard from 27 experts across seven topics, including the corporate responsibility to respect human rights, the role of government, access to remedy and grievance mechanisms, bringing a human rights lens to Indigenous engagement and human rights in the supply chain. Alexandra Guaqueta, then Chair of the UN Working Group on Business and Human Rights, provided international perspectives on the day and provided a channel for Australian practice to be shared globally.

The Dialogue highlighted that the discussion had largely moved beyond “why” business should respect human rights, to practical questions around “how” to effectively do so.

2015 Australian Dialogue on Business and Human Rights*

In partnership with the Australian Human Rights Commission
Sponsored by Allens
August 2015, Sydney

After the success of the inaugural Dialogue in 2014, the GCNA and Australian Human Rights Commission convened the second Australian Dialogue on Business and Human Rights: Moving from policy to practice in August 2015.

Again, over 100 representatives from business, government, civil society and academia came together to take the pulse on where the business and human rights agenda is at, and identify ways to move it forward.

International business and human rights expert John Morrison, Executive Director, Institute for Human Rights and Business joined us from the UK to deliver the keynote address, “Business and human rights – do we have the right incentives?”

Businesses and stakeholders explored challenges and successes in practically implementing the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. Participants also identified areas where policy and practice can be strengthened, and how this could be achieved through stronger collaboration between business, government and civil society.

The GCNA also convened various side events with John Morrison, including a briefing for Australian investors on business and human rights and the new international human rights benchmark for Fortune 500 companies.

The GCNA will continue to engage with the Australian Government around policy development in this space.

* Event held after end of 2014/2015 financial year.

Building an Australian Security and Human Rights Community of Practice

Security and Human Rights Workshops

Hosted by DFAT (Melbourne) and Allens (Perth)

July 2014, Melbourne and March 2015, Perth

In 2014, the GCNA launched its Security and Human Rights Community of Practice, as a peer forum for senior security representatives from extractives companies and their community relations colleagues, together with select security experts, to share and explore challenges and best practice in relation to security and human rights.

The Community of Practice also provides an opportunity for extractives companies to engage with the Australian Government around the Voluntary Principles on Security and Human Rights.

Since its launch, the GCNA has convened two Community of Practice workshops, one in Melbourne, and one in Perth, focused on practical challenges facing Australian extractive companies in relation to security and human rights. Deep dives on real life case studies, focusing on challenging contexts were used to illustrate what did and, critically, did not work with company responses, and the value of the Voluntary Principles in challenging contexts.

The workshops also provided the Australian Government, which is a signatory to the Voluntary Principles on Security and Human Rights, an opportunity to understand the challenges facing companies on the ground, and what it can do to better support them.

The workshops also allowed companies to share views on the Government’s implementation plan for the Voluntary Principles.

The GCNA, together with DFAT and AAMIG and sponsored by Woodside, also convened a Voluntary Principles side-event at Africa Down Under in Perth in September 2015.
In early 2014, the GCNA launched its Indigenous Engagement Working Group. During 2014, the IEWG discussed different rights set out in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (the Declaration), their relevance to business and opportunities for business to advance the Declaration.

In 2015, the GCNA convened a workshop that brought corporate practitioners and a panel of Indigenous leaders together to discuss the “how to” of Australian businesses respecting and supporting Indigenous rights.

The workshop provided participants with insights into the history of Indigenous rights in Australia and the Declaration. The workshop also provided an opportunity to hear the perspectives of Indigenous leaders on Australian businesses’ successes and challenges regarding the respect and support of Indigenous rights.

Key themes including engagement, governance and employment were explored. Corporate case studies were also shared and discussed, with the aim of identifying how business can more effectively contribute to the enjoyment of Indigenous rights in Australia.

Speakers included: Mick Gooda, Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner, Professor Marcia Langton AM, Foundation Chair, Australian Indigenous Studies, University of Melbourne, University of Melbourne, Robynne Quiggin, Senior Advisor, Australian Indigenous Governance Institute, Hope Perkins, Indigenous Engagement Coordinator, University of Melbourne School of Engineering & IT and Professor Ian Anderson, Pro Vice Chancellor Engagement and Foundation Chair for Indigenous Higher Education, University of Melbourne (Facilitator).

* Event held after end of 2014/2015 financial year.
The Road to Paris: Encouraging business action on climate change

Australian Launch of Road to Paris and Science Based Targets Initiatives
In partnership with CDP, WWF Australia and the Balanced Enterprise Research Network (BERN) at the University of Sydney Business School

May 2015, Sydney

In May 2014, the GCNA, CDP and WWF Australia launch the Science Based Targets initiative, which aims to encourage businesses to set new, ambitious greenhouse gas (GHG) emission reduction targets consistent with climate science, ahead of COP21 in December 2015.

The event highlighted the central role businesses must assume in responding to climate concerns through the reduction of GHG emissions. An extensive debate was held on the changing global political context in the lead up to COP21, the increasingly marginalised position of Australia, as the world shifts towards carbon regulations and renewable energy, and how some companies are already adopting a long-term approach to climate change in their operations.

Speakers included: Martijn Wilder, Director, WWF Australia; Amanda McKenzie, CEO, Climate Council; Alice Cope, Executive Manager, Global Compact Network Australia; James Day, Director – Australia & NZ, CDP; Emma Herd, Executive Director, Emissions and Environment, Westpac; Richard Wilson, Sustainability Manager, Ikea Australia; and Margaret Stuart, Corporate and External Relations Manager, Nestlé Oceania.

Bob Massie on Global Climate Action: Realities and prospects
In partnership with and hosted by Chartered Accountants Australia and New Zealand

February 2015, Sydney

The GCNA together with Chartered Accountants Australia and New Zealand hosted a lunch with Bob Massie, outgoing President and CEO of New Economy Coalition, co-founder and first chair of the Global Reporting Initiative and initiator of the Investor Network on Climate Risk.

At this lunch, Bob shared an international view of how fast things are moving in the global climate policy space, including the potential for a global climate agreement, and what this means for business. He also explored the opportunities and challenges offered by the transition to a low carbon economy.

Webinar: Setting Science-Based Carbon Reduction Targets

November 2014

This webinar explored the Precautionary Principle – the internationally-recognised principle, which guides the management of environmental and social impacts and risk – and what it means for Australian businesses’ sustainability approach.

The Global Compact’s seventh principle states ‘business should support a precautionary approach to environmental challenges’. At the heart of this is the idea that, from a business perspective, prevention is better than cure. This webinar delved into what the Precautionary Principle actually means in practice, how Australian businesses can take meaningful steps to manage environmental risks and how they can take a proactive approach to sustainability.

Speakers: Meg Lee, Managing Associate, Allens; Darragh Brennan, Sustainability and Communications Manager, Solaris Paper.

Business for the Rule of Law Consultation Workshop
In partnership with LexisNexis
March 2015, Sydney

In September 2013, the UN Secretary-General announced an exciting new initiative to engage the business community in efforts to support the rule of law – Business for the Rule of Law (B4ROL).

The UN Global Compact worked closely with a number of actors across the UN, private sector and other stakeholder groups to develop a framework to provide guidance on how businesses globally can take voluntary action to support the rule of law in the regions in which they operate – particularly where the rule of law is not well established.

This workshop convened senior legal practitioners, primarily General Australian Counsel, to contribute to the draft B4ROL framework. Input from the Australian workshop – one of a number held globally – served as a critical resource in finalising the framework, which was launched in New York in June 2015.

Amanda Keogh, Wendy Tyrrell (Transparency International Australia) and Rachel Nicolson (GCNA and Allens) discuss governance and transparency at the Business of Sustainable Development forum.

They provided practical advice for businesses in the event of a suspected or actual instance of corruption covering; when to approach the AFP; whether companies receive credit for cooperation; and risk of personal exposure for company directors.

Speakers included: Linda Champion, Manager Fraud and Anti-Corruption, Australian Federal Police; Anthony Coles, Assistant Secretary, Criminal Law and Law Enforcement Branch, Federal Attorney-General’s Department; Shane Kirne, Deputy Director, Office of the Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions; Chris Savundra, Senior Executive Leader, Markets Enforcement, ASIC; Peter Haig, Partner, Allens (Facilitator).

These workshops provided an overview of key Australian and international laws related to corruption, bribery, and enforcement approaches being pursued by authorities domestically and internationally.

Through peer learning from leading Australian businesses, the workshops also explored the elements of effective anti-corruption policies and compliance programs (such as risk assessment, scope, engagement with third parties, embedding policies and compliance programs, monitoring and reporting), as well as how companies can develop these to manage risks and meet stakeholder expectations.

Speakers included: Kate Hughes, Chief Risk Officer, Telstra; Geoff Bell, Group Risk & Compliance Officer, Innovia Security; Peter Janu, General Counsel, WorleyParsons, Toni Milis, Group Executive, Lendlease; (Facilitator (Sydney)): Peter Haig, Partner, Allens and Rachel Nicolson, Partner, Allens and Director, GCNA (Facilitator (Melbourne)).
2015 has been a watershed year for the global sustainable development agenda. In September, the UN launched the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) that now set global development priorities to 2030 and apply to both developing and developed countries. As the primary driver of economic activity, business is critical to achieving this agenda.

Internationally, the UN Global Compact has played a key role in bringing business perspectives to the inter-governmental SDP negotiations.

In Australia, the GCNA has been building a platform to drive business engagement in sustainable development, leveraging the historic opportunity presented by the SDGs for business to align strategies and activities with global priorities.

Through our work in this space, we aim to help scale up corporate sustainability as a key contributor to broader development challenges in Australia and across the region. The appointment of GCNA Executive Manager, Alice Cope, as Regional Representative on the UN Global Compact’s Local Networks Advisory Group complements this work, and enhances the GCNAs ability to provide links and foster collaboration across the region.

Our strong relationship with DFAT and the new SDLG provide a unique channel for GCNA members to engage with the Australian Government around sustainability.

> In 2014, GCNA Executive Manager, Alice Cope, appeared before the Joint Parliament Committee on the role of the private sector in promoting economic growth and reducing poverty in the Indo-Pacific region. The UN Global Compact, and one of its key platforms, the Women’s Empowerment Principles, were highlighted as key frameworks in this space. Recommendations in the report included that DFAT ensure staff have an expert understanding of the UN Global Compact and are able to connect businesses in Australia and overseas to local Global Compact representatives.

> In August 2015, the GCNA signed a significant two-year partnership with the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT). The partnership, with funding of $350,000 over two years, aims to promote GCNA’s mandate and grow its Australian membership base. This will bring more Australian businesses into a network of organisations with shared beliefs that align with our interest in reducing poverty in the region. The partnership will strengthen and leverage the GCNAs convening power, strong network of companies and relationships with UN Global Compact networks in the region.

> As an early step under our DFAT partnership, we have launched the GCNA’s Sustainable Development Leadership Group (SDLG). The SDLG – being advised by a Steering Committee of business representatives, sustainability experts and DFAT representatives – provides a platform for business and stakeholders to engage in learning, dialogue and action around sustainable development and the SDGs. The SDLG will also provide an interface between business and DFAT, supporting the implementation of the Australian Government’s new aid policy, which emphasises private sector engagement and development.
The Business of Sustainable Development: Building business engagement in sustainable development and the UN Sustainable Development Goals

In partnership with the UN Sustainable Development Solutions Network
Hosted by BHP Billiton
February 2015, Melbourne

The Global Compact Network Australia (GCNA) and the Sustainable Development Solutions Network Australia-Pacific (SDSN) convened over 80 representatives of business, government, NGOs and academia at a significant, multi-sector, multi-stakeholder workshop, The Business of Sustainable Development.

Participants heard from a number of business leaders and experts across six sessions. The workshop brought Australian businesses up to date with the global sustainable development agenda and the SDGs, and explored the role of business in relation to sustainable development.

It emphasised the importance of corporate engagement in sustainable development being underpinned by respect for fundamental principles of corporate responsibility such as those of the UN Global Compact.

The workshop also highlighted that there are already large-scale commitments from Australian companies to sustainable development and provided some useful models for potential business alignment with the SDGs.

Partnering with DFAT

CEO Roundtable with the Hon. Julie Bishop MP*
August 2015

The GCNA convened an exclusive roundtable with the Foreign Minister, the Hon. Julie Bishop MP, for the CEOs of corporate members, ahead of the launch of DFAT’s private sector engagement strategy.

In 2015, the GCNA convened a workshop that brought corporate practitioners and a panel of Indigenous leaders together to discuss the “how to” of Australian businesses respecting and supporting Indigenous rights.

This roundtable discussion provided a unique opportunity for GCNA member CEOs to share with the Minister their perspectives on sustainable development and how the Australian Government can most effectively partner with business to drive development outcomes in the Asia Pacific region.

September 2015

This webinar provided an opportunity to hear from DFAT on the Government’s perspectives and expectations on the sustainable development agenda and the SDG negotiations, what the agenda will mean for Australia and Australia’s role in the region, and the Government’s expectations and hopes for private sector contribution and engagement. It also provided an opportunity for businesses to share their perspectives on the agenda with DFAT.

Megatrends: Linking sustainability strategy and risk
Hosted by Telstra
September 2014, Melbourne (Sydney via videoconference)

Global megatrends – such as climate change, resource stress, demographic changes, urbanisation, technology and shifts in economic power – are transforming societies and economies at a rapid pace, creating both risks and opportunities for business. Responding to these megatrends provides a key opportunity to embed sustainability into core business activities and strategy.

The forum offered the opportunity to explore Australian thought leadership in this space, focusing on the relevance of megatrends to Australian businesses, the risks and opportunities megatrends give rise to, and how megatrends can be used to inform sustainability strategy and influence broader corporate strategy and risk approaches. Sustainability professionals were encouraged to bring strategy and risk colleagues.

Speakers: Professor John Thwaites, Chair, Monash Sustainability Institute and ClimateWorks, and Chair, National Sustainability Council; Dr Stefan Hajkowicz, Leader, CSIRO; Chi Woo, Partner, Climate Change and Sustainability, KPMG; Liza Maimone, Partner, Sustainability and Climate Change, PwC.

Webinar: From tactical to strategic: How Australian businesses create value from sustainability
January 2015

In December 2014, GRI Focal Point Australia, together with CPA Australia and KPMG Australia, launched research – From Tactical to Strategic: How Australian businesses create value from sustainability – on how ASX companies are recognising the impact of key global megaforges on their business over the next 20 years.

The research revealed how Australian businesses are (and are not) recognising, responding to, and creating value from these challenges. In particular, it highlighted that while companies broadly understand their own sustainability impacts, they do not yet fully understand how global sustainability trends are impacting their businesses.

This webinar provide a briefing on the research findings and key lessons for Australian businesses in understanding, and strategically responding to, the megaforges in ways that will create value in the short, medium and long terms.

Speaker: Victoria Whitaker, Head of Australia, Global Reporting Initiative.

Creating Transformational Change: Engaging employees to make business truly sustainable
Hosted by PwC
March 2015, Sydney

Engaging employees from all areas of a company’s business is critical to creating truly sustainable organisations. Not only do employees increasingly want to work for sustainable companies, but the social and environmental challenges we face mean business needs to be done differently to ensure long-term success.

This workshop explored how sustainability teams take employee engagement beyond putting waste in the right bin to facilitating the business transformation required to create a truly sustainable company.

Participants were presented with a range of expert perspectives, on internal engagement and transformational change, and given practical tools to help drive sustainability engagement and sustainable change throughout their company.

Speakers included: Cate Harris, Sustainability Executive – Strategic Projects, Lendlease; Lynette Nixon, Innovation Director, PwC Australia; Dr Chris Wright, Professor of Organisational Studies, University of Sydney; Matt Perry, CEO, Conscious Capitalism and Chief Strategy Officer, Ikon Communications.

Auditor’s Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on the financial report based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with Australian Auditing Standards. Those standards require that we comply with relevant ethical requirements relating to audit engagements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial report is free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial report. The procedures selected depend on the auditor’s judgement, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial report, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the Company’s preparation of the financial report that gives a true and fair view in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the Company’s internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by the directors, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial report.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.
